PROPOSED FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDED DISPOSITION

INSTRUCTIONS

This recommended disposition has been submitted to United States District Judge Lee P. Rudofsky. The parties may file specific objections to these findings and recommendations and must provide the factual or legal basis for each objection. The objections must be filed with the Clerk no later than fourteen (14) days from the date of the findings and recommendations. A copy must be served on the opposing party. The district judge, even in the absence of objections, may reject these proposed findings and recommendations in whole or in part.

RECOMMENDED DISPOSITION

Angela L. Hill, Plaintiff, has appealed the final decision of the Commissioner of the Social Security Administration to deny her claim for disability insurance benefits. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) concluded she had not been under a disability within the meaning of the Social Security Act, because she could perform her past relevant work despite her impairments. (Tr. 16-25.)

This review function is extremely limited. A court's function on review is to determine whether the Commissioner's decision is supported by substantial evidence on the record as a whole and to analyze whether Plaintiff was denied benefits due to legal error. Long v. Chater, 108 F.3d 185, 187 (8th Cir. 1997); see also, 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). Substantial evidence is such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion. Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 401 (1971); Reynolds v. Chater, 82 F.3d 254, 257 (8th Cir. 1996).

In assessing the substantiality of the evidence, courts must consider evidence that detracts from the Commissioner's decision as well as evidence that supports it; a court may not, however, reverse the Commissioner's decision merely because substantial evidence would have supported an opposite decision. Woolf v. Shalala, 3 F.3d 1210, 1213 (8th Cir. 1993).

The history of the administrative proceedings and the statement of facts relevant to this decision are contained in the respective briefs and are not in serious dispute. Therefore, they will not be repeated in this opinion except as necessary. After careful review of the pleadings and evidence in this case, I find the Commissioner's decision is supported by substantial evidence and Plaintiff's Complaint should be DISMISSED.

Plaintiff was fifty-one years old at the time of the administrative hearing. (Tr. 37.) She testified she went as far as the eleventh grade in school and earned a GED. (Id.) She has past relevant work as a liquor establishment manager. (Tr. 24.)

The ALJ¹ found Ms. Hill met the disability eligibility requirements to apply for disability

insurance benefits. (Tr. 18.) She has “severe” impairments in the form of “migraines, degenerative disc disease of the lumbar spine with radiculopathy, left knee arthralgia, and sacroiliac joint dysfunction.” (Id.) The ALJ further found Ms. Hill did not have an impairment or combination of impairments meeting or equaling an impairment listed in 20 C.F.R. Part 404, Subpart P, Appendix 1.² (Tr. 18-21.)

The ALJ determined Ms. Hill had the residual functional capacity (RFC) to perform a reduced range of light work given her physical impairments. (Tr. 21.) The ALJ utilized the services of a vocational expert to determine what jobs, if any, Plaintiff could perform given her RFC. Based in part on the testimony of the vocational expert, the ALJ determined she could perform her past relevant work as it is performed generally in the economy. (Tr. 25.) The ALJ stated, “The vocational expert testified the claimant can perform her past relevant work as generally performed as described by the Dictionary of Occupational Titles but not as actually performed. Pursuant to SSR 00-4p, the vocational expert’s testimony regarding the claimant’s ability to perform her past relevant work is consistent with the information contained in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles.” (Id.) Accordingly, the ALJ determined Ms. Hill was not disabled. (Id.)

The Appeals Council considered additional evidence and then denied Plaintiff’s request for a review of the ALJ’s decision, making his decision the final decision of the Commissioner. (Tr. 1-12.) Plaintiff filed the instant Complaint initiating this appeal. (Doc. No. 2.)

In support of her Complaint, Ms. Hill argues that the ALJ’s RFC assessment was flawed. (Doc. No. 14 at 8-15.) Ms. Hill clearly suffers from some degree of pain and limitation from her back disorder. But given my limited review under the law and my careful assessment of the ALJ’s opinion, the extensive medical record, and the briefs from the respective parties, I find that the ALJ's opinion is supported by substantial evidence.

I have carefully reviewed the evidence Plaintiff cites in support of her argument. While this evidence does show that Plaintiff suffers from some level of pain and limited range of motion, these records fail to support an allegation of complete disability. "Disability" is the "inability to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment which can be expected to result in death or which has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than 12 months." 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(1)(A) (emphasis added). A "physical or mental impairment . . . results from anatomical, physiological, or psychological abnormalities which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques." 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(3). I find no reversible error here.

The ALJ carefully considered the record and made a supported determination that Plaintiff was capable of performing a limited range of light work. In coming to this conclusion, the ALJ considered the extensive medical records and the opinions from medical professionals. And in his opinion, the ALJ fairly set out the rationale for his conclusions. And while I recognize they only evaluated the medical evidence and did not have the benefit of actually examining Ms. Hill, the opinions of Ben Johnson, M.D., and Brett Alberty, M.D., constitute substantial evidence upon which the ALJ could rely. (Tr. 77-81, 96-101.) In addressing their opinions, the ALJ stated:

They supported the findings with references to the record and they are familiar with disability determination regulations. Moreover, the findings are consistent with objective evidence from other sources. For example, although she exhibited tenderness and restricted range of motion at times (9F/4, 10, 13F/3), the claimant generally exhibited normal gait without an assistive device (e.g. 8F/11, 9F/4, 10, 13F/3, 29). Furthermore, she was able to move all extremities well (e.g. 13F/23) and demonstrated normal strength and tone (17F/16).

There is ample evidence to support the Commissioner's decision. I recognize there is also evidence to support Ms. Hill's claims, including diagnostic tests that reveal some abnormality with her back. (See e.g. Tr. 452, 548, 747-751.) Yet the overall evidence supports the ALJ's conclusion that she was not disabled.

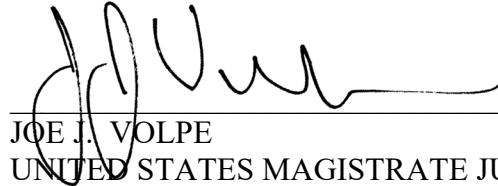

Plaintiff had the burden of proving her disability. E.g., Sykes v. Bowen, 854 F.2d 284, 285 (8th Cir. 1988). Thus, she bore the responsibility of presenting the strongest case possible. Thomas v. Sullivan, 928 F.2d 255, 260 (8th Cir. 1991). Plaintiff has simply not met that burden. The record contains ample support as a whole that "a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support [the] conclusion" of the ALJ in this case. Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 401 (1971); see also, Robertson v. Sullivan, 925 F.2d 1124, 1126-27 (8th Cir. 1991).

Plaintiff has advanced other arguments which I find are without merit. Ms. Hill's counsel has done an admirable job advocating for her. But it is not the task of a court to review the evidence and make an independent decision. Neither is it to reverse the decision of the ALJ because there is evidence in the record which contradicts his findings. The test is whether there is substantial evidence on the record as a whole which supports the decision of the ALJ. E.g., Mapes v. Chater, 82 F.3d 259, 262 (8th Cir. 1996); Pratt v. Sullivan, 956 F.2d 830, 833 (8th Cir. 1992).

I have reviewed the entire record, including the briefs, the ALJ's decision, the transcript of the hearing, and the medical and other evidence. There is ample evidence on the record as a whole that "a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support [the] conclusion" of the ALJ in this case. Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. at 401; see also Reutter ex rel. Reutter v. Barnhart, 372 F.3d 946, 950 (8th Cir. 2004). The Commissioner's decision is not based on legal error.

IT IS, THEREFORE, RECOMMENDED that the final decision of the Commissioner be affirmed, and Plaintiff's Complaint be dismissed with prejudice.

DATED this 13th day of December 2021.
